Whether you're a U.S.-based business looking to expand internationally or a foreign enterprise looking to export your goods and services, the 2008 Gateway to International Trade Conference will present you with the opportunity to learn how to successfully expand your brand into new markets around the world. Bankers, lawyers, accountants, and consultants with in-depth, working knowledge of international trade will brief you on the set-up process and help you assess whether you're ready to make the move cross-border.

Professionals from around the world will be in attendance, representing such countries and regions as *(see list on right):

List subject to change.*

Highlights of this half-day conference include:

- Keynote Speaker Seth W. Pinsky, President, New York City Economic Development Corporation, who will speak on "The Global Marketplace: Opportunities for Companies in the 2000s"
- Presentations from leading businesspeople—including representatives of Nexia International, HSBC, and J.H. Cohn—on the issues and challenges you may face in your import/export or other international business
- Opportunities to network with other business owners and leaders who deal in international trade
